COOPERATIVE BRANDS AND PROCESSED FOODS

WHY WE COMPILED THIS DIRECTORY

Members of the general public, including many people in the farmer cooperative community itself, are unaware that many of the food products they buy carry brand names owned by farmer cooperatives. They are unaware of the contribution cooperatives make toward providing them with a wide array of safe and nutritious foods.

A national Gallup poll in 1976 disclosed people's inability to recognize cooperative-branded foods. Seventy percent of the people interviewed could not recognize any of the four national cooperative brands among a list of eight.

Because of the general unfamiliarity with farmer cooperative products and repeated requests for lists of cooperative brands, Farmer Cooperative Service has assembled this directory of cooperatives processing and marketing cooperative-branded food products.

This directory has limitations for several reasons: (1) participation was voluntary and some cooperatives chose not to participate; (2) though an effort was made to include all cooperatives marketing branded products, regrettably some may have been missed; (3) limited resources dictated including only processed products (thereby excluding fluid milk products, fresh meat, fresh fruits and vegetables, and shell eggs) and only cooperatives marketing products with their brands (excluding cooperatives marketing products with brands of other firms); and (4) it was virtually impossible to list all product varieties, styles, container sizes and types, specialty products, or other important product information.

In some cases the cooperative listed is a federated cooperative marketing branded products processed by its member-associations which are not listed here. In a few cases, several cooperatives share a brand but only one of the cooperatives may be listed in this directory. Also, the few cooperatives having distributor brands are excluded from the directory. For example, Universal Cooperatives, Inc., of Alliance, Ohio, is a federated cooperative marketing branded products under its "CO-OP" brand, some of which are processed by its member-associations.

This publication has a dual purpose, to: (1) inform you of the extent that farmers are involved in food processing and brand marketing through their cooperatives; and (2) acquaint you with the wide array of cooperative branded food products.

If your cooperative is not included in this listing and you would like to see its brands included in subsequent editions, send the information to Farmer Cooperative Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250.

COOPERATIVE BRANDS AND PROCESSED FOODS

Clement E. Ward
J. David Morrissy

Americans annually consume several billion dollars worth of foods marketed by farmer-owned cooperatives. Yet a majority of Americans know nothing about cooperatives or could not identify any cooperative foods.

Agricultural cooperatives are business organizations owned and controlled by the farmers who use them. Farmer-members specialize in producing raw agricultural products. Many of the cooperatives they own process raw agricultural products and market consumer food products under cooperative brands to the retail stores where you shop.

Some of the cooperatives listed in this report specialize in processing and marketing products from a single commodity. Consequently, most are relatively small compared with some of their noncooperative competitors. Many cooperatives, however, have achieved a significant degree of success in brand marketing their members' products. You may be surprised at how many brands you know that belong to the 82 farmer-owned cooperatives providing information for this report.

Cooperative brands—about 300 are listed here—range from Alpine to Zumbro Valley. You probably recognize many as national brands, though many cooperative-branded foods are marketed in only one or more regions. Though cooperative foods are listed here under more than 230 subgroups—from almonds to zucchini, cooperative food products actually number many times that.

Though farmer-owned cooperatives as a group are comparatively small, the 82 participating cooperatives listed in this publication had a combined business volume in fiscal year 1975-76 estimated to be $15.5 billion. They marketed $11.5 billion worth of farmers' products and supplied farmers with $4.0 billion worth of farm supplies and services.

Individual cooperatives' marketing volume during the same period ranged from $2.3 million to $1.4 billion. A size distribution of the 82 cooperatives based on marketing volume is presented in table 1. Interestingly, some of the nationally known cooperative brands you will recognize belong to cooperatives in the smaller groups.

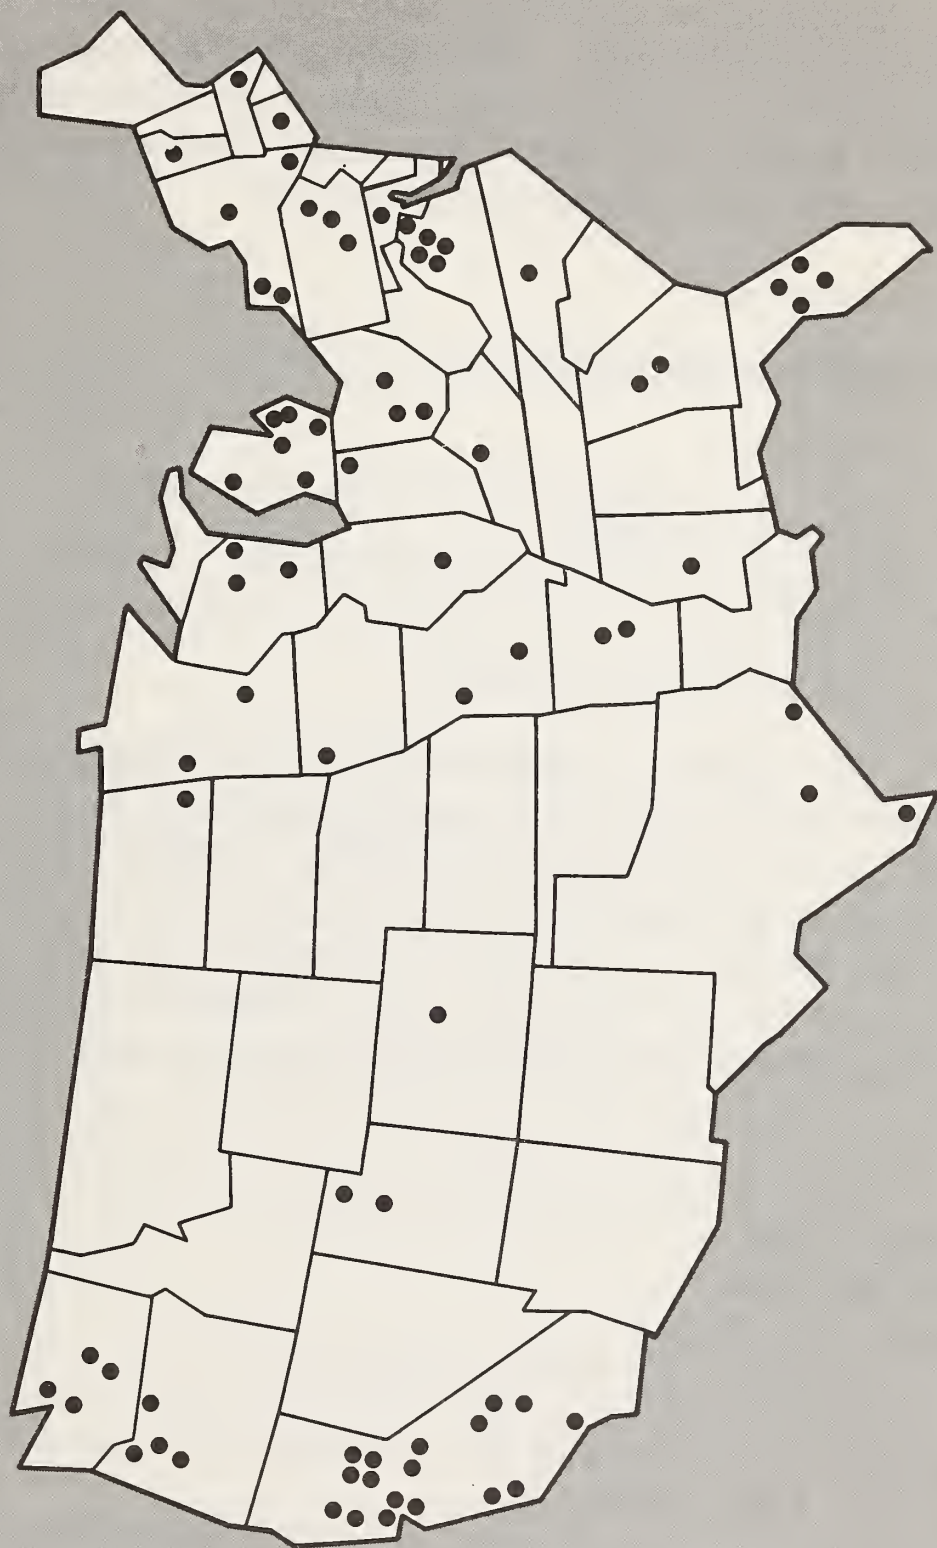

Table 1—Size distribution of cooperatives marketing farm products, by dollar volume, 1975-76¹

Marketing volume	Number of cooperatives
Million dollars
300 or more	8
150 - 299	14
75 - 149	12
27 - 74	27
Less than 25	21
Total	82

Participating cooperatives, scattered throughout the United States, are headquartered in 28 States (fig. 1). Some cooperatives have farmer-owners spread over one-third of the Nation; others have farmer-owners concentrated in only one or a few counties in a single State. Farmers either directly own the cooperatives listed in this publication or own local associations that in turn own a federated regional cooperative. Owner-members of the 82 cooperatives number 4,098 local associations plus 428,701 direct farmer-owners.

COOPERATIVES

Cooperatives marketing food products under their brands are listed alphabetically, with mailing address, and brands listed alphabetically in italic. Their products are listed under primary product groups with letters in parentheses after each product to indicate the preserving process, as follows:

(C) canned

(D) dried or dry packed

(F) frozen

(G) glass or bottle

(M) milled

(R) refrigerated or chilled

An asterisk (*) inside the parentheses along with the letter designating the preserving process means the product in that form is marketed exclusively to food service or industrial users. A letter designating the preserving process but without an asterisk means that the product in that form is marketed to the retail trade or the food service or industrial trade. A slash (/) between products means that the cooperative markets one or more of those products.

FARMER COOPERATIVE SERVICE
U.S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

Farmer Cooperative Service provides research, management, and educational assistance to cooperatives to strengthen the economic position of farmers and other rural residents. It works directly with cooperative leaders and Federal and State agencies to improve organization, leadership, and operation of cooperatives and to give guidance to further development.

The Service (1) helps farmers and other rural residents obtain supplies and services at lower cost and to get better prices for products they sell; (2) advises rural residents on developing existing resources through cooperative action to enhance rural living; (3) helps cooperatives improve services and operating efficiency; (4) informs members, directors, employees, and the public on how cooperatives work and benefit their members and their communities; and (5) encourages international cooperative programs.

The Service publishes research and educational materials and issues Farmer Cooperatives. All programs and activities are conducted on a nondiscriminatory basis, without regard to race, creed, color, sex, or national origin.
